Revolution in Meat Packing Gains Speed, Armour May Quit

THE WEEKLY LIVESTOCK REPORTER

Fort Worth, Texas, June 16, 1983

Parent Greyhound Corp., Tells Board To Trim Costs or Sell the Fresh Meat Slaughtering Plants, Handlers

BY TED GOULDY.

The upheaval in the wholesale fresh meat packing business gained speed last week when Greyhound Corp. authorized its board to either close or sell its Armour Food Co. plants, with the first target those operating under the "master contract" with the United Food & Commercial Workers Union. The firm contends it is in no position to compete with other packers with its present labor costs. The Armour move comes shortly after Oklahoma City-based Wilson Foods Corp. filed under Chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Code in an effort to escape a union contract it signed and made that company non-competitive with other plants enjoying more favorable labor contracts.

Public Hearings Set For Water Plan Programs

Austin — The executive director of the Texas Department of Water Resources will conduct eight public hearings to receive public comments from citizens, government officials, and interest groups and organizations on the Department's draft planning report, "Water for Texas: Planning for the Future." Hearings will begin Tuesday, June 21, in Longview, and end on (CONT. ON PAGE 6)

Cattlemen Expecting Brucellosis Problem To Be Settled Soon

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said Monday that a special session of the Texas Legislature would take place "in a few weeks" to deal with the brucellosis problem and other unfinished business from the recent regular session. It has been generally understood that the session was absolutely necessary for several reasons, including the imminent demise of the Texas Employment Commission among other things. July 11 has been mentioned as a probable date for the special session.

However, there is a strong feeling in the cattle industry that the matter to allow the Texas Animal Health Commission to regain control may come before the Legislature can get organized. Several cattlemen closest to the controversy told The Weekly Livestock Reporter they had been in touch this past weekend with Austin authorities and they felt "much better about the (CONT. Movement To Organize Breeding Cattle Association Studied

One of the aftermaths of the recent meeting in Austin of Texas breeding cattle producers has been the projection of a plan for all concerned to establish an organization of all purpose associations and commercial cattlemen to present their views and problems to legislative bodies and officials. Realizing that a united front of the people concerned in these matters carries more weight than individual efforts the proposals being given serious consideration.

Fed Cattle Uneven, Hogs Mostly Higher At Central Markets

Receipts of cattle and hogs were slightly lower at the central markets on Monday, but the trade on both species was highly uneven from point to point. In the fed cattle trading heifers and lighter weight steers puttable for a two-way packer-feeder trade and Holsteins were moving better than heavier weights of 1,200 lbs. or more. Slaughter cows and bulls were little changed at these markets. Monday's estimated cattle kill at 183,000 was (CONT. ON PAGE 28) agreements with the Maritime Union and other such unions which were certain to promote more peaceful relationships and less interference in plant operations and rules.

Most of the major packers of the old school have maintained a large share of the food business by engaging in production and sale of consumer items ranging from canned foods to frozen foods and finished products such as sausages, etc. However, the exodus from the actual slaughtering and production of fresh carcasses continues to be abandoned by packers saddled with high labor costs and less efficient plants. The matter of volume has also been a large factor. Smaller plants all over the country have been closing in increasing numbers in recent years.

A new crop of "major" or "big packers" has been developed and the modernization of the meat and food business is going forward at a rapid rate. Some of the new breed of livestock slaughterers, which we refer to as hog slaughter, which is a good pinch on plant equipment and less labor costs. Armour's case is similar. Wilson's unfair advantage in their pack business and operations caused the excess to be sold to Roos Ranch.

Polled Hereford Showmen Headed For Reno, Nevada

Some 275 exhibitors from 30 states and Canada will be showing Polled Herefords at the 10th National Junior Polled Hereford Show in Reno, Nev., July 17-22. More than 400 entries are scheduled to show in this event that has come to be recognized as one of the largest youth events of its kind in the year.

Besides the show, slated for July 20-21, other planned activities include a youth leadership forum, speech contest, Polled Hereford judging contest, and the annual Polled Hereford Beef Bowl.

A special forum has been scheduled to discuss career opportunities in agriculture ranging from animal production and veterinary medicine to range management and ag communications.

Nationally known cattle authorities judging the show will be Bill Jacobs of California Polytechnic State University, San Luis Obispo; Billy Tufts of G. Tufts and Sons Polled Herefords, Hillsboro, Texas; and Jim Strawn, manager of Falklands Farm, Schellburg, Pa. The finale of the National Junior Showmanship Contest will also be held in Reno, with 59th National Polled Hereford Herdman of the year Glenn Erickson of Glenkirk Farms, Mayaville, Mo., serving as judge.

Some $7,500 in premiums will be awarded for the 20 heifer classes and the cow-calf competition.

To achieve this award any member of the TPHA who is instrumental in signing up three new TPHA members will be awarded a class winner pin and inducted into the Grand Champion Club. For those members signing up more than three, special awards will be made, with the leader in membership sign ups being named the Grand Champion of the year's membership drive and will receive a very special award for his or her work.

This is one of the most positive things we have going for the TPHA today so get out and find new members.

Texas Poll-Elites On The Move!

All systems are "GO" in the Poll-Elites these days! We are looking forward to the tour, to the Poll-Elite Auction and to the crowning of the new Miss Texas Poll-Elite and Mr. Texas Poll-Elite.

Let's try to make the auction the best ever, with our scholarship and trophy obligations for the Junior program and the upcoming Fort Worth National January 1984), we need an especially successful fund raiser.

Groundwork for the National is already being laid by the joint efforts of the TPHA and Poll-Elite board of directors. The support and work of all members, of both TPHA and the Poll-Elites, is needed in order to have a national success.

By now, Poll-Elites should have received the form to vote for the Mr. Poll-Elite of their choice. Past, as well as

Kopper Penny, Little Polled Herefords Top Kilgore College Test

Kopper Penny Ranch, Inc., Cooper Texas, consigned the high-indexing Polled Hereford to the recently completed Kilgore College Bull Test, Overton, Texas. He posted an average daily gain (ADG) of 3.68 lb., yearling weight of 1,065 lb., and weight per day of age (WDA) of 2.84 lb.

The number one Polled Hereford sire group was consigned by B.F. Little, Wills Point, Texas. This trio of T & S Gilead T216 sons had an average ADG of 3.25 lb., average yearling weight of 934 lb., and average WDA of 2.64. The number two individual Polled Hereford in the ranking was consigned by Johnny Bagley, Henderson, Texas. His entry, BCF Victoria Banner, beat the average by more than 17 percent with an ADG of 3.84 lb., yearling weight of 1,080 lb., and WDA of 2.84 b.

New Low Cost, High Performance Wind-Powered Water Pumbers

DENVER - Windynamics, Inc. of Denver, Colorado, announced today its new line of "wind turbine" mechanical water pumbers of a vertical-axis rotor design. Available in 4', 6' and 8' diameter versions, the machines can produce up to 5,000 gallons per hour depending on depth.

The company claims that livestock and agricultural users can achieve substantial savings over conventional energy and maintenance intensive equipment by using its turbines, and that their simplicity of design and structural integrity, with far fewer moving parts, make them far more reliable than fan or propeller type windmills. Windynamics water pumbers are the result of 4 years of research and development and are noted for their exceptional high torque from low RPM, operating at winds speeds as low as 8 mph. Construction features include a solid weldment all-aluminum rotor and rugged all-weather transmission. Gyroscopic effect of the vertical axis allows units to be post-mounted, eliminating the need for guide wires or expensive scaffold type structures. Propellerless rotor design assuring safe, noiseless operation, plus their light weights make the Windynamics units ideal for any difficult access installations.

Windynamics water pumbers are the

Time To Control Mesquite In West And North Texas
SAN ANGELO, Texas, June 7 - Now through the first or second week of July is the time to spray herbicides to control mesquite on West and North Texas ranches that harbor most of the state's 55 million acres of the thorny brush. It could be a good year for it, depending on local conditions.

In many areas, range specialists say, conditions are such they expect this to be the best year since 1980 for getting good control with herbicide treatments. But recent hail, insect activity and dry weather followed by rain in other places has added some "if's" to earlier expectations for a good spraying year across the entire mesquite belt.

"A rancher's best bet is to learn the factors that affect good herbicide action on mesquite and then check the condition of the brush on his own ranch," says Dr. Jim Bob Grumbles, Dallas, a range scientist who is a herbicide specialist for Dow Chemical U.S.A.

"Best results can be expected when mesquite has good dark green foliage, soil temperatures are above 78 degrees at a 15-inch depth, and there's good ground moisture," he says. "The mesquite needs to be healthy and free of stress to properly translocate herbicides from the foliage to the root zones."

Dr. Ueckert agrees it is best not to spray mesquite if it has a lot of new, light green growth. Thick foliage is required for best control.

As for soil temperature, Dr. Grumbles says it is "critical" to reach 78 degrees at a depth of 12 to 15 inches before spraying. Optimum is considered about 88 degrees at that depth but results should be good if other factors are at any time soil temperature is 75 degrees or above.

Dr. Jacoby believes there may be more treatment of mesquite in North Central Texas this year than there has been in recent years because conditions are good and introduction of the Grazon herbicide has reduced the price ranchers pay for picloram. "I have heard of large blocks that are going to be sprayed," he says.

Mesquite has proven a persistent, hard-to-control pest with little redressing value from the rancher's point of view.

Researchers are continually looking for large scale, practical uses that would make mesquite a cash crop but neither Dr. Jacoby nor Dr. Ueckert expects that to happen soon. Uses have been found but, Dr. Jacoby says, "The cost of producing saleable products out of mesquite is too high for it to be economically feasible."

Dr. Jacoby at Texas A&M's Vernon Research Station says cold temperatures delayed mesquite's leafing in North Texas and the spray season is a little later than normal. But moisture is good and leaf development, which he calls "better than average," probably is not more than a week or two behind schedule. Conditions are generally favorable for good control and the time to spray is "real close," he says. "The best time to spray is 40 to 80 days past bud break and we are ap-

New Automatic Mill For Big Volume Grain ProcessingNew Financial Program From Massey-Ferguson Attractive

Farmers have traditionally owned most of their machinery. In recent years, however, several economic developments have encouraged farmers to more seriously consider non-ownership alternatives.

Today's farmer is operating in an environment of increasing capital investment for machinery purchases, a high rate of machine obsolescence, heavier demands for capital in all areas of farming, and a related strain on traditional sources of working capital. Consequently, there is a growing realization by farmers that machine use, not ownership, is most essential to profit making.

Nearly all successful farmers today recognize flexible financing options as a desirable source of capital for financing all kinds of capital equipment needs. They recognize that the use of equipment produces profits, whether or not that equipment is owned. So to keep lines of credit and working capital available for other purposes, they are turning in more frequently to options other than purchase.

The use of flexible financing tailored to individual users, their periods, cash flow requirements, and equipment applications, is Financial Merchandising.

Simply stated, Financial Merchandising is a creative sales approach to a customer's problems of financing the acquisition of machinery he needs.

Massey-Ferguson's Financial Merchandising programs include:

Installment Purchase
Equity Financing
Leasing
Rental
Rental Purchase
Buy-Down

These programs offer the customer a great deal of flexibility — of time, of advance payments, of payment schedules, of financing rates, or skip payments, and of ways to combine and vary these to suit the needs of every customer. For more information, see your local Massey-Ferguson dealer.

"I have heard of large blocks that are going to be sprayed," he says.

But he cautions ranchers to keep close watch. "If it starts raining after a dry period, that could change the picture," he says. In some areas, there's a possibility of a replay of problems that resulted in 1981 and 1982 when rain during the spray season caused new sprouts of mesquite foliage growth that moved herbage outward instead of translocating it through the plant as desired. "NEW STUFF" (continued)Insecticide Tags Out Of The Ear Proves Effective

The following story on a new fly control program was written by a Kansas State U. student, James T. Ryan.

Using insecticides impregnated ear tags but not placing them in the ears of cattle is a new control method for face and horn flies.

This method of fly control requires that the animal must walk under and rub the tags which are attached to the bottom of a dust bag (without insecticide) or on a tire chain strung between two poles, says A.B. Broce, livestock entomologist at Kansas State University.

Another method which is similar to this is the use of insecticide ear tags on the curtain of mineral feeders, says Eugene Francis, area extension livestock specialist. This is being done on the Rhine brothers farm in Washington County, Kansas, and they have had "good control of flies."

Francis says, "Control has been 95 to 100 percent effective on horn flies and 90 percent effective on face flies."

This is better control for face flies and equivalent control for horn flies as compared to placing two ear tags on the ears of cattle, according to Kansas State University research.

Francis recommends hog ringing one ear tag per cow/calf pair on the curtain in May and then placing an additional tag per cow/calf pair in July. This will control face and horn flies for the entire season, says Francis.

"The cattle go to the mineral feeder once every second or third day which is enough time to control the flies," Francis explained.

When the tags are put on a dust bag or chain, the tags have to be placed where the cattle are forced to go through.

"The tags can be placed over an entrance to a mineral box or to the watering source," says Broce.

Since the face and horn fly population varies from year to year, it is hard to predict how many tags are needed.

Broce says, "Cattle should be monitored to see if the fly control is adequate. If there are too many flies the operator should place more tags on the bag or chain."

One advantage of placing the tags on a chain, dustbag or on a curtain of a mineral feeder is that the flies can be controlled without tagging the cattle.

Broce, who has been doing research on this fly control system four years, says that using ear tags in this fashion, compared to placing them in the ears, may control the flies more economically and slow down the development of resistance of flies to the insecticide.

With the use of too many ear tags the horn and face flies can build up resistance faster since the flies that survive are the most tolerant and are the ones that reproduce, said Broce, who notes that insecticide ear tags are not recommended for use in the feedlot.

Kansas State University studies show that Estelin and Aroban ear tags, used as labeled give 95 to 100 percent control of horn flies and 80 to 70 percent control of face flies.

"This can mean $20 more beef per calf at a cost of two to three dollars," says Don Mock, extension integrated pest management coordinator.

These ear tags won't control stable flies, which are a problem in confinement operations, so they are not recommended for use in a feedlot, says Broce.

If you are looking for the best tag on the market which tag would you buy?

You have a choice between green, red, yellow or clear ones; 3-sided, 5-sided, 7-sided or elongated, with a cost range of between $.75 and $1.25 depending on the brand and number bought.

According to research on tags that were available last year there were few differences between the brands on the market.

Chemicals used in all of the ear tags are pyrethrins; fenvalerate and permethrin.

A descriptive list of insecticide ear tags was provided by a pesticide industry.

A long strip tag has advantages on a dust bag or chain because it is longer and rubs the cattle more frequently.

Use of insecticide ear tags on bulls isn't recommended. The thick neck of bulls will not allow the head to swing back and rub on the body sufficiently enough to rub the insecticide on, says Broce.

Whether to use ear tags on a mineral feeder curtain, on a dust bag or tire chain, or to place the tags in the ears of the cattle is the decision for individual producers. For more information contact Fred Mann, Box 444, Waterville, KS 66548. Phone 913-785-2117 (night).

It's time for gardeners to stop gardening and start "farming," says a horticulturist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System. Gardeners should look at their backyard plots and therefore should relate to farming. Conservation estimates indicate that about half of Texas' population is involved in growing fruits and vegetables at home. These urban agriculturists should look at their backyard plots and make many of the same decisions that farmers do when deciding varieties, planting dates and matters.

"NEW STUFF" (continued)New Computer Software Available

San Antonio, Texas, — Peerless Software, a division of PECCO, Inc., dba Peerless Equipment Co., has announced the development of the PEERLESS AgriSystems®. A company spokesman stated that the systems will consist of hundreds of programs designed specifically for Farmers and Agribusinesses including such things as Crop and Field Management, Livestock Management and Grain Elevator Management. The system's unique design allows all modules to be fully integrated not only among themselves but also with their highly revolutionary Accounting System. The Peerless Accounting and Management Analysis System will allow for both book value and fair market value accounting simultaneously, unlimited Enterprise Accounting complete with TEFRA and GAAP compliance.

Another remarkable feature is the system's unique and virtually unlimited analytical reporting capability. Although another division of PECCO, Inc. is an authorized IBM Personal Computer Dealer for San Antonio and surrounding area, Company officials stated that the software will be made available for most microcomputers, both floppy based and fixed disk and that the National Distribution network is currently being formed. Product release is scheduled for the mid-summer market of this year.

The CPM Ripener below is introduced by California Pellet Mill Co. makes it possible to extend the conditioning time of feeds prior to the pelleting process.

By increasing conditioning time, the mill operator can expect improved germination of starches, the softening of fibers, improved liquid and steam absorption, and the activation of natural binders.

Installation requires placing the unit between the feed bin, equipped with its own feeder/mixer, and the feeder/mixer on the pellet mill (see diagram).

Developed by CPM in Europe and used extensively there, the CPM Ripener is said to offer a number of additional advantages, depending upon the ingredients: improved pellet quality, more efficient utilization of steam, higher levels of molasses and other liquids, reduced fines, increased die and rod life, and improved salmonella control.

New System Increases Feed Processing Efficiencies

Columbus, NE — Portable roller mills manufactured by Henke Machine, Inc. can pack more grain into less space. During harvest, they can be used when filling pit silos.

In storage, rolled grains pack tighter to increase storage capacity by about 25 percent. In addition, tests have shown rolled grains outperform whole grain in stretching livestock feed conversion," Wayne Davy, president of Henke, said.

Mill capacities range up to 1800 bushels per hour. They can process shelled corn entering or leaving storage under both high and low moisture conditions. The fineness of grind can be adjusted easily while the mill operates.

Rolls crack grains like milo, barley and wheat with minimal flouring.

Options include hydraulically-driven input augers, either seven or twelve inch discharge elevators for all grains. For an extended life, the mills are made with heavy-gauge steel and have replaceable wear plates at the end of the rolls to eliminate frame wear. Case-hardened rolls last up to four times longer than regular rolls. Standard seven and nine inch rolls efficiently crack and move high capacity loads.

Customized nine inch rolls are available. Other options are the two-high model with upper set of rolls for coarse cracking and lower set of rolls for fine grinding.

Henke has manufactured feed-grain processing and handling equipment for over 40 years. More information on portable roller mills and other Henke products is available from Henke Machine, Inc., P.O. Box 1006, Columbus, Nebraska 68601.

Borden Bospro® Feeding Supplement Is Improved

Elgin, IL. — Borden's Bospro ruminal supplement, on the market for more than 25 years, has recently been reformulated to improve its benefits for dairy and beef cattle.

Bospro provides nutrients needed for growth of rumen microflora that are sometimes limiting in feed rations. This allows cattle to more closely achieve their genetic potential for growth and milk production.

In an early trial at Georgia Experiment Station, Experiment, Georgia, Prof. M.E. McCullough found that original formula Bospro used for flustered steers, increased the volatile fatty acids produced in the rumen. The subsequent addition of Bospro to a sorghum-silage-based ration improved average daily gain by 8% and reduced feed required for 100 lbs. of gain by 8%.

A more recent feeding trial at the same station using growing cattle illustrates the improved benefits of new-formula Bospro. All cattle in the test were fed a cotton seed hull, cotton seed meal corn ration at the rate of 20 pounds per head daily. The average weight of the cattle during the test was 734½ pounds. The group of cattle which received an additional one ounce of new formula Bospro showed the greatest average daily weight gain — 2.75 lb. — and used only 7.90 lbs. of feed per pound gain. These cattle gained weight 18% faster and used 14% less feed than cattle which received only the control ration.

Cattle fed one ounce of the original Bospro in addition to the control ration showed a 6% improvement in average daily weight gain and feed efficiency over the cattle which received only the control ration.

Details of the most recent test as published in the Animal Fact Sheet by the Animal Science Division of the University of Georgia are available from Borden, Inc.

New-formula Bospro is produced by the Feed Supplement, Fat-Ag Division of Borden, Inc. Requests for additional information can be made to Borden, Inc., RR 1, Box 127, Elgin, IL 60120. Toll free number 800-828-0877.

In its comparatively brief history as a U.S.-based tractor company, Kubota Tractor Corporation has become the leader in the compact tractor market. It attributes its success to high-quality product, an unequalled reputation for service and a strong dealership organization.

the fourth largest in the world,

tractors, now ranging from 10 to 76 tractor companies moved out of the under-80-horsepower market to concentrate on larger, heavier machines.

The "Little Orange," however, known for high standards of quality workmanship and engineering innovation, frequently matches and even outperforms many of its high-powered competitors.

Kubota Tractor Corporation was formed 1972 with only 18 employees,

a Japanese coordinator, two engineers and a small warehouse just outside of Los Angeles. During its first six years, sales increased rapidly, with on-the-company's success.

In 1973, Kubota introduced the 12-wheel drive tractor in Japan, exporting this as the B6000 to the U.S. in 1974. At the time, this 12-horsepower machine was the smallest water-cooled diesel tractor in America. Common among larger tractors, the 4-wheel drive was unheard of among smaller models — and it quickly established itself as a viable commodity. During the

Clayton Williams Receives State 4-H Award

College Station — Clayton W. Williams of Midland, a longtime supporter of the 4-H program in Texas, was one of five individuals and organizations cited for outstanding service during the 1988 Texas 4-H Roundup at Texas A&M University June 7.

Williams was presented a special plaque by the Texas 4-H Foundation, the service organization of 4-H and the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Williams, a rancher, oil producer and real estate developer, has supported the 4-H beef recognition program in Texas since 1979, said Tom Davison, state 4-H program leader with the Extension Service.

The 4-H beef program annually provides four medals of honor to the top enterprise system, both of which are strongly supported by Williams.

Williams' contribution to 4-H through the beef program has helped thousands of 4-H members gain a deeper understanding of beef production and its impact on the Texas economy, noted Davison.

Through this recognition program, 4-H members are provided with the incentive to strive for excellence in beef production and to learn about the free enterprise system, both of which are strongly supported by Williams.

Dale Martin and grandson bought the top selling female at the D&B Brangus Dispersal, June 1 in Dallas.

Ludwig Brand Is Brangus Breeder Of The Year

Gardner, chairman of the Selection Committee, Burton, Texas, made the presentation to the enthusiastic Brangus supporters at the sale site, River Hill Country Club, Kerrville, Texas.

Dedication, determination and enthusiasm are just three of the many words that describe the recipient of the 1983 Brangus Breeder of the Year, Ludwig Brand.

The Houston, Texas resident is certainly not a newcomer to the Brangus breed as he became a member of the International Brangus Breeders Association (IBBA) on May 1, 1967. This marked the beginning of Brand's countless hours of dedication and hard work promoting and progressing the Brangus breed.

Brand has been a continual motivator and inspirator for the breed and he was especially influential while serving as president of the IBBA in 1981. Brand has chaired several IBBA committees and is presently completing his final year on the IBBA Board of Directors. He also officiated as president of the Texas Brangus Breeders Association (TBBA) and was a member and chairman of numerous TBBA committees. As chairman of the TBBA Promotion Fund Committee, Brand organized the fund raising auctions which allowed for a considerable boost to the TBBA promotion budget.

Brand's perpetual determination was the driving force in the expansion of the IBBA headquarters as he was chairman of the Building fund in 1979. During this time Brand established a goal of raising $100,000 to pay off the mortgage of the IBBA headquarters in San Antonio, Texas. This mark was greatly surpassed as over $800,000 was raised for the project. The building is now owned free and clear by the IBBA with contributions made by the IBBA membership and through Brand's leadership efforts a 2,971 square foot expansion of the building was made possible.

As an avid supporter of the International Junior Brangus Breeders, Brand has sponsored an award for the Brangus Champion Junior Futurity heifer along with a $50 stipend since the show's beginning, eight years ago.

The Brangus ambassador was born in Hamburg, Germany in 1959. Later, Brand and his parents lived in Poland where his father was in the hide business. During the eruption of World War II, Brand's father was in the United States on business. Brand and his mother weathered the war in Poland and in 1949 Brand was able to join his father in the States.

He enrolled in the University of Houston at the age of 16 with no knowledge of the English language. While taking a full college course load during the day, he studied English for foreign students at night. In 1954 he received a B.S. degree in animal husbandry and was just 10 hours shy of a masters degree in 1955 when he joined the U.S. Coast Guard. After two years of active duty, Brand returned to become an instrumental part of the family hide business, Southwestern Trading Company.

Brand's initial start in the cattle business was with the Polled Hereford breed. He later crossed them with Brangus bulls and the results far exceeded his expectations. Today, Brand's ranch is located near Round Top, Texas and consists of 413 acres and over 250 registered Brangus females.

The successful Brangus breeder and his wife, Judy, have two children, Kelly and Ryan, 17. Both will attend college in the fall with Kelly attending Vassar College, Poughkeepsie, New York, and Ryan attending Williams College, Williamstown, Massachusetts. Judy plays an active role in the ranching operation as she handles all registrations and records and is an IBBA certified inspector. Together, the family creates and designs their own ranch advertisements and sale catalogs and handle all their own photography.
